

67
Brooklyn, Sept. 1, 1835.

My dear Henry—

I have only two or three minutes in which to say, that all the bundles and ~~letters~~ you have forwarded, have safely arrived. Ten thousand thanks for your attention and kindness. The letter from bro. Thompson was quite refreshing. Mrs. May goes this morning to Boston, via Worcester, in company with our esteemed friend Scarborough. I regret that I have no editorial prepared to send by her, but shall send something by the Providence mail to-day noon—also more by the Worcester stage on Wednesday, which will be received on Thursday, I hope, in season for this week's paper. Hope the bundle containing my letter to Sprague has not miscarried. Thank you for paying such close attention to poor puss. Am pleased to learn that you and friend K. make such famous housekeepers. Success and happiness to all old bachelors! Feel rejoiced to learn there is no such person as John Gerry. We shall probably return to Boston in all next week. — All the dear domestic circle reciprocate your loving remembrances, and are all well.

Yours, ardently, W. L. G.

[The page contains extremely faint, illegible handwriting, likely bleed-through from the reverse side. The text is arranged in approximately 20 horizontal lines across the page.]